Expedition Overview

Embark on an exhilarating 24-day journey to summit the iconic Mt. Ama Dablam (6,812m), often referred to as the “Matterhorn of the Himalayas.” Located in Nepal’s Mahalangur range, this stunning peak is renowned for its distinct pyramid shape and challenging Southwestern ridge route, first conquered in 1961.

The expedition begins with a thrilling flight from Kathmandu to Lukla, followed by a trek through the scenic trails of the Khumbu region. Each day involves 5-6 hours of trekking, allowing ample time to acclimatize before reaching Ama Dablam Base Camp. Climbers will experience a combination of hotel, lodge, and tent accommodations, ensuring comfort and safety throughout the journey.

This technical climb involves setting up three high camps above the base camp, with progressively more thrilling challenges as you ascend. With a maximum elevation of 6,812 meters (22,349 feet), the expedition offers unparalleled views of Everest, Lhotse, and the surrounding peaks, making it an unforgettable adventure for experienced climbers.

The expedition is guided on a 1:1 ratio (one guide per climber), ensuring personalized attention and top-notch safety standards. While prior trekking experience is not mandatory, basic mountaineering skills and the ability to trek at high altitudes (4,000m to 5,600m) are essential.

The cost for the Ama Dablam Expedition is $8,500 per person, covering expert guidance, logistics, and comprehensive support to make your climb a success. Join us this Spring 2025 to summit one of the Himalayas’ most iconic peaks and create memories that will last a lifetime.
